Information about Copyrighted Content

Some instruments administered as part of this study may contain in whole or substantially in part contents from copyrighted instruments. Reproductions of the instruments are provided as documentation for the analysis of the data associated with this collection. Restrictions on "fair use" apply to all copyrighted content. More information about the reproduction of copyrighted works by educators and librarians is available from the United States Copyright Office.

NOTICE
WARNING CONCERNING COPYRIGHT RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material. Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

Data Collection Procedures:

Data for 1869 through 1876 are from G. Rowell & Co's American Newspaper Directory ("Rowell's"). Data for 1880 through 1928 are from N. W. Ayer & Son's American Newspaper Annual ("Ayer's"). Data for 1932 through 2004 are from Editor & Publisher Yearbook ("E&P"). We scanned the volumes for 1869 and each presidential election year thereafter to pdf, and had them converted to machine-readable text by a data entry firm.

Our dataset includes English-language daily newspapers. We consider a newspaper to be a daily if it circulates 4 or more weekdays each week. In cases where newspapers published multiple editions, typically both a morning and evening edition, we treat those as separate records. We exclude foreign-language newspapers, national newspapers (the Christian Science Monitor, Wall Street Journal and USA Today), and some clearly non news publications (e.g., real estate listings, live stock listings, etc.) from the sample.

We use an automated script (supplemented with manual corrections) to match newspapers across years on the basis of their title, city, and time of day. The script allows for some inexact matches and tries to identify cases in which multiple newspapers merge to form a new paper. We use this matching to construct a time-constant classification of political affiliation. The vast majority of affiliations are "Democratic," "Republican," or "Independent," with the share of Independent affiliations growing over time. We define a time-constant measure of affiliation for each newspaper, where papers are classified as Republican if they ever declare a Republican affiliation and Democratic if they ever declare a Democratic affiliation. In the handful of cases where a newspaper declares a Republican affiliation in one year and a Democratic affiliation in another, we use the majority affiliation. We also construct a time-constant measure of newspapers' publication times by carrying forward the first publication time — "morning", "evening", or "all day" — we observe for each newspaper.

Each newspaper is associated with a city. We use an automated script to match city names over time, in some cases grouping cities together to ensure a stable geographic concept. We use an automated script (supplemented with manual corrections) to match listed city names to Census-defined places. We use the 1990 Geographic Identification Code Scheme (GICS) data from the US Census Bureau to match Census places to counties. In cases where there were multiple counties assigned to a place, we chose the county that was home to the highest proportion of the place's population. A small number of listed city names do not have matches, often because they are small towns that no longer exist.

Cities with no English-language daily newspapers in a given directory year are not included in the dataset.

Further details on data quality and cleaning are available from: Matthew Gentzkow, Jesse M. Shapiro and Michael Sinkinson. The Effect of Newspaper Entry and Exit on Electoral Politics. 2011, American Economic Review. Please note that the data in this archive may differ slightly from the data used in "The Effect of Newspaper Entry and Exit on Electoral Politics" due to minor improvements to some data fields.

The files with names "USNP (Ayers Dir)" contain representative pages from Ayer's Annual Newspaper Directories.
